Jordan Spieth welcomed his first child, a son, on November 14th. Getty Images A great year just got even better for Jordan Spieth and his wife, Annie, who announced the birth of their first child together, a boy they named Sammy Spieth.Spieth made the announcement with a post on Instagram on Thursday, saying the baby was born on November 14th. "Sammy Spieth born 11/14 Mama and baby doing great!" the new father wrote. "Feeling blessed!" Spieth confirmed that he and Annie were expecting a baby back in September after the second round of the Tour Championship, and that the couple had decided to wait until the baby's birth to find out the gender. With 1 shot, Jordan Spieth proved to himself that he really is 'back' By: James Colgan The new parents have a long relationship history: Jordan and Annie were high-school sweethearts and got engaged in 2017, then were married in 2018.The birth is a fitting exclamation point on what has been a resurgent year for Spieth, who ended a four-year winless streak by claiming the Valero Texas Open in April. Spieth posted a total of nine top-10s and 14 top-25 finishes last season, earning over $6.4 million, and went 1-2-1 at the Ryder Cup at Whistling Straits. The pro golfer, 30, shared the happy news on Instagram Wednesday that he and his wife Annie Verret welcomed a baby girl named Sophie on Sept. 12. PEOPLE has reached out to Spieth's rep for comment. Sophie is the couple's second baby. The pair — who tied the knot in 2018 — welcomed son Sammy in November 2021. At the time, Spieth shared a sweet photo of Sammy's tiny hand clutching his own. "Sammy Spieth born 11/14," he declared in the post's caption. "Mama and baby doing great! Feeling blessed!" Sammy, who will turn 2 in November, adorably stole the show when he accompanied his dad and mom to this year's Masters Par-3 Contest at Augusta National in Georgia. In one photo shared on the PGA Tour's official X account, the father-son duo could be seen "testing out the rough in Augusta." The little boy was dressed for the occasion in a green baseball cap, a classic white caddie outfit pinned with his dad's name and a tiny pair of white sneakers. Other photos from the event captured Sammy hanging out in the bunkers and even hitting a few putts. Spieth shared photos from the day on Instagram at the time, writing, "Rain cut Sammy's caddie debut short but he looked the part!" It seems Spieth's son also mingles with golf's biggest stars. In January, Tom Kim told Sports Illustrated that he babysat Sammy over the holidays. The South Korean player said that he flew back to Dallas with Spieth after attending Tiger Woods' Hero World Challenge event in the Bahamas. Spieth, not wanting his friend to have to spend Christmas alone in Dallas, invited Kim to spend the holiday with his family — and that included doing a little babysitting. "I was kind of by myself," Kim told SI. "So I got to spend some time with the Spieths and kind of babysit Sammy, which was really cool. But, yeah, it's been amazing to kind of build a friendship and it was really cool to play with him today." Kim raved about Sammy, telling the outlet, "Oh, my God, Sammy's amazing. He's the most wonderful little boy I think I've ever met. He's just absolutely amazing. So definitely I've seen a lot of kids, but he's, he definitely makes it a lot easier." In July, Spieth and his family celebrated a big milestone together: the athlete's 30th birthday. Spieth posted a photo on Instagram showing him and Annie posing with Sammy in front of their home, surrounded by an array of colorful balloons. "30!!! Thanks for all the birthday love yesterday!" he wrote. The PGA Tour star, 30, shared the good news, revealing that he and Annie welcomed a baby girl, their second child, Sophie, on September 12. The three-time major winner shared a black-and-white close-up photo of him cradling his new daughter, captioning the post: "Welcome, Sophie 9/12/23" Many of his peers took to the comments section to congratulate the American, including Min Woo Lee and Smylie Kaufman. Team USA's Ryder Cup account even chimed in, writing: "Welcome Sophie - so happy to have you on the US team!! Jordan Spieth announced the birth of his daughter, Sophie, with wife Annie on Instagram The Spieths welcomed their first child, a son named Sammy, on November 14, 2021Sophie's arrival comes as the USA ramps up its preparation for the biennial tournament against Europe. The Americans will be looking to end their drought on European soil next week and retain the Ryder Cup in Rome. Spieth was named as one of Zach Johnson's six captain's picks and is set to make his fifth appearance at the Ryder Cup. He missed the USA's scouting trip to Marco Simone due to Annie's pregnancy. Spieth popped the question to his high school sweetheart in 2017. He and the Texas Tech graduate officially tied the knot in November 2018 - getting married in their home state of Texas - and according to Golf.com, fellow golf stars Fowler, Jason Dufner, Jimmy Walker, and Zach Johnson were some of the players in attendance. They welcomed their first child, a son called Sammy, on November 14, 2021. 'Mama and baby doing great!' Spieth shared on Instagram after his birth. 'Feeling blessed!'Sammy has made a handful of public appearances, including at the Presidents Cup at Quail Hollow, where he adorably wore headphones to protect his ears from the noise. He also stole the show at The Masters earlier this year during the Par 3 contest, when players' wives and children traditionally caddy. He had a blast rolling around in bunkers, testing the Augusta rough and even hitting a few putts with the help of dad. The toddler has even been babysat by fan favorite Tom Kim at Christmas time after the South Korean struck up a close friendship with Spieth. The PGA Tour standout and his wife, Annie Verret, who married in 2018, welcomed their first child, son Sammy, in November 2021. Two years later, their family grew once again with the birth of their daughter, Sophie, in September 2023. Most recently, Jordan announced that he and Annie are expecting their third child in summer 2025. Despite the demands of professional golf, Jordan prioritizes family time and shares how much fatherhood has shifted his perspective. "I think having kids and recognizing that, where golf was [my] life, I don't think it's necessarily a very healthy thing," the Dallas native shared in a press conference in July 2024. "I'd like to be a lot of other things, and what I do is play golf, versus it was all-encompassing. And so that frees your mind up a little bit to maybe take a little bit of pressure off on the bad weeks." On April 9, Jordan's family joined him at the annual Masters' Per 3 Contest. While an expecting Annie played caddy for the day, Sammy showed off his tee shot, and Sophie was mesmerized by the course. From their early milestones to the ways they inspire their dad, here's everything to know about Jordan Spieth's kids: Sammy, Sophie and the third baby on the way. Jordan Spieth with his son Sammy Spieth in October 2024. Jordan and Annie welcomed their first child, Sammy Spieth, on Nov. 14, 2021. The professional golfer announced the birth on social media, sharing a sweet photo of his newborn's tiny hand wrapped around his finger. "Sammy Spieth born 11/14 Mama and baby doing great!" the first time dad wrote on Instagram. "Feeling blessed!" The couple initially kept their pregnancy under wraps until Annie walked the course at the Tour Championship in September 2021, and she was showing. "It's something you can't hide now that we are close," Jordan told PGATour.com after the event. "It's been a really great year. I've been blessed on a lot of fronts. ... So it should be an exciting fall." Sammy has had a front-row seat to his dad's career since the start. In April 2022, Jordan celebrated his dramatic win at the RBC Heritage by holding his then-5-month-old son while wearing the tournament's signature plaid jacket. Though too young to understand the significance, it was a special moment for the new dad, who was calmed by Sammy's presence. "It just takes your mind off of things and puts it where it should be, which is in the moment of hanging out. I really, really enjoyed that." While it's too early to tell if Sammy will follow in his dad's footsteps, he's already starting to accumulate the necessary equipment if he chooses to do so. On Father's Day in 2022, Jordan showed off a golf bag engraved with Sammy's name and birthdate. The following spring, in April 2023, the duo got to share a special moment at the Masters Tournament's annual Par 3 Contest. During the event's family day, Sammy served as a miniature caddy for Jordan, who gave him pointers on his putting. Since then, Sammy has continued supporting his dad at the Par 3 Contest. After his sister Sophie made her debut at the special occasion in April 2024, the brother and sister returned this year on April 9, where Sammy donned a white outfit and appeared to have improved his skills on the green. Away from the golf course, Sammy enjoys quality time with his parents. Jordan, who is a University of Texas at Austin alum, shared a photo of them twinning in Longhorns gear and throwing up the school's signature "Hook 'em Horns" gesture. According to Jordan, his son enjoys a different form of action. "He loves monster trucks, so we were at the monster truck rally," he said on The Smylie Show in February 2025. "Welcome, Sophie 9/12/23," he wrote on Instagram, sharing a black-and-white photo of him cradling the newborn. Jordan had initially planned to join a Ryder Cup scouting trip to Marco Simone in Italy, but according to ESPN, he stayed home to support Annie during the birth of their daughter. The Ryder Cup team embraced the news, responding to Jordan's announcement with a warm message. "Welcome Sophie — so happy to have you on the US team!!" they commented. Like her older brother, Sophie is a fixture at the golf course. She was present at the Masters' family day, which her father called "our favorite tradition."
